

TOP 10 TIMES TO VISIT YOUR PROFESSOR'S OFFICE HOURS

Your professor is one of your most important resources on campus, and their office hours are a great way to engage more deeply in your learning.

Get in the habit of visiting office hours to ask questions, learn more about the subject, make sure you're on the right track with papers and exams, and more.

You may want to go to office hours:

1. Before you take an exam
2. When you get an exam back
3. Before starting a paper
4. When you have a rough draft
5. When you get a paper back
6. Mid-semester when you think you're doing well
7. Anytime you're struggling
8. When you're really interested in an idea or topic
9. If you will need to miss a class
10. When you're looking for a friendly ear!

Make an appointment with a Study
Mentor for more tips on the transition to college

Student Success Tips from the Center for Teaching and Learning
Hobart and William Smith Colleges